

9 Apps To Keep You Organized & Proactive In Vocational Ministry

FREE MINISTRY RESOURCE

9 Apps To Keep You Organized & Proactive In Vocational Ministry

Julie Lavin, LPC | ministry resource

No. 1 | Canva

This website and app can pack a punch for your ministry and support raising. Use it to design appealing supporter newsletters, ministry event flyers, social media posts, etc. There is a paid version, but the free version is stellar on its own. Check it out. I use it weekly.

No. 2 | Quickbooks

If you have an expense and reimbursement tracking systems provided by your sending agency, great! If not, Quickbooks is an awesome system, with desktop and a mobile app. I use Quickbooks for Self-Employed. I have tried to find a free financial tracking system that I liked, but they all came up short. Quickbooks is easy to use and makes tracking your ministry expenses a breeze. Costs $10/month.

No. 3 | Asana

This app and website is an wonderful project manager. It can track everything in your personal and ministry world. I use the free version. If you need help in how maximize what it can do, email me. I can recommend an online course I took that was really good. I use it several times a day to manage my life, my business and even my grocery lists. It's a must have app for me.

No. 4 | Google Drive

You may already have Google Drive on your phone, so I maybe preaching to the choir. Google Drive can keep track of ministry documents, newsletter files, notes on disciples, just to name a few. You can access your files from any device. It rocks!

No. 5 | Dropbox

A lot of people use Dropbox like I use Goggle Drive. I use Dropbox for their easy scanning feature. This could come in handy managing ministry receipts. Google Drive doesn't have a scanner feature on iPhones yet. So I use the Dropbox scanner and then save the files to Google Drive.

No. 6 | Kira Stokes Fit

The is a workout app. She has a free 7-day trial, but worth the investment to subscribe. This app is great for exercise on the go — i.e. ministry conferences where you want to work out in your hotel room and you don't have equipment.

No. 7 | Cloze

Cloze is a contact management system. I don't use this service yet. but I'm signing up for it soon. It is a paid service. If your ministry doesn't have a way to manage your support raising contacts, this would be a great option. It's user friendly and has features that I never thought I needed. This could up your support raising game!

No. 8 | She Reads Truth

You may also say, "Uh Julie...I use this already." Great! But if you don't know about She Reads Truth or He Reads Truth, their apps have wonderful devotionals that you can use in your walk with Jesus, especially when you are away from home — which for most missionaries is a lot!

No. 9 | Noisli

I've tried many white noise apps, especially when writing newsletters in a noisy coffee shop and focus eluded me. Noisli is super easy to use and you can create tons of white noise combinations to work or relax from a hard ministry day. The website is free, but the app is currently 1.99.

I receive no monetary compensation for recommending these websites and apps. I just love them, use them, and want to tell you about them. If they can make your life or full-time ministry a bit easier or more efficient, then that makes me smile.]